Disclaimer

MagnaCleanse Flush.

Whilst it is extremely rare for a heating system to experience leaks after the MagnaCleanse flushing process, the need to use dispersing chemicals, may mean the flushing process could discover and disturb already weakened corroded joints or fragile (T)hermostatic (R)adiator (V)alves with immediate effect, as oppose to a natural discovery which could take up to 3 months to show. It is not practical, logical nor does the technological capability exist to inspect a central heating system internally for vulnerable joints before flushing the system.

Systems which have been neglected over a period of time, or have not been treated with an effective corrosion inhibitor, may have severely compacted corrosion debris, in the pipe work, radiators, or boiler, and it is possible that even after a MagnaCleanse flush, some radiators may still not be fully effective, or boilers on the margin of failure may cease working due to sludge and debris later breaking loose and collecting in the heat exchanger.

The price that we have stated allows for a MagnaCleanse flush only and if any of the above symptoms or similar problems arise during or after the MagnaCleanse flush we will not be held responsible in any way. Any further work required would be carried out at an additional cost.
